Creating A Community

Who Doesn't Like Pizza?

While creating a delicious pizza is the main event of Pizza 4 Producers, the true goal is to bring together the community and address the mental health challenges that are prevalent in the agricultural industry. According to several studies, a significant portion of agricultural producer's experience stress that affects their day-to-day lives, and many of these farmers don't have access to a support system to help them through their struggles. Pizza 4 Producers is designed to help build community and support amongst farmers and reduce stigma surrounding mental health in agriculture.

Don McMoran, D.W., Agriculture & Natural Resources Extension Faculty & Director

In October 2022, the very first Pizza 4 Producers event was held, led by Extension Professor Don McMoran. The event was a resounding success, and several other events have been held since. Each event includes the building of a wood fire oven, making the dough, selecting the dough, and baking the pizza itself. Everyone works together to create something wonderful they can all enjoy, crafting bonds that will last a lifetime.

Robin Morgan, the man leading the producers in the making of the dough had this to say:
"If you pull on it right now, it breaks. If you let it relax for a little while, it will stretch but not break, just like the farmers and farmworkers."
